PENFIELD, N.Y., JUNE 24, 2009 – Amy Rosenbaum Steklof will be sworn in as Penfield Town Clerk at the Town Board legislative meeting July 1, 2009 in the Town Hall auditorium, 3100 Atlantic Avenue. A brief reception will follow. In March, the Penfield Town Board announced the selection of Steklof to complete the term of retiring Cassie Williams.

Ms. Steklof is a Penfield native with experience in education, administration, records management and community service. Upon her swearing in, Steklof will continue a family tradition of public service. Her father, Richard Rosenbaum, is a retired New York State Supreme Court Justice and author. Matthew Rosenbaum, past Penfield Town Councilman and current New York State Supreme Court Justice is Steklof’s brother. Ms. Steklof will run for election in November 2009 to continue in the role of Town Clerk. The Town Clerk’s term is four years.

“I’m a lifelong Penfield resident and graduate of Penfield schools, and I’m honored by this opportunity to serve my community,” said Steklof. “I will join an excellent town staff and pursue ideas to extend the Clerk’s hours to make business transactions with the Town more accessible for busy families. I’m also interested in the benefits of developing E-business options for the Town and taxpayers.”

Supervisor George C. Wiedemer said, “Ms. Steklof’s experience, history of community involvement and ideas to extend customer services will serve Penfield well.”
Ms. Steklof and her husband, Kevin Steklof, financial adviser and president of Steklof and Co. Insurance Agency, Inc., live in Penfield. They are the parents of three children who have attended Penfield schools. Their two oldest children now attend university.
